Your Cough Can Be Stopped

Using care to avoid draughts, ex-posure, sudden changes, and taking a treatment of Dr. King's New Discovery, will positively relieve, and in time will surely relieve you, of your cough. The first dose soothes the irritation, checks your cough, which stops in a short time. Dr. King's New Discovery has been used successfully for 45 years and is guaranteed to cure you. Money back if it fails. Get a bottle from your Drug-help you so much.—Advertisement

"Woolner's Tip."

The little tip or point that often appears on the inwardly folded margin of the human ear near the top has received the name of "Woolner's Tip," from the sculptor Woolner, who first reproduced it in his bust of Darwin.
Other sculptors, though they must have noticed the tip, never reproduced it. Darwin held that this tip was a remnant of a wrinkle left by the colling up of the ear, and hence a proof of man's descent from lower animals.

DISCIPLINE IN GERMAN ARMY

Military Rank Always Recognized as Taking Precedence Over Even Highest Civilian Standing.

In front of the headquarters of the German general staff an American correspondent witnessed an amusing little scene not long ago. Military discipline is strict in the German army, and military rank, in war time, supersedes civil rank. So he was more interested than surprised to observe, on looking at a couple of noncommis-sioned officers, waiting patiently for their young lieutenant, who had gone in to do the talking, that the elder, and, by the straps on his uniform, the lower in rank of the two, was a famous professor of philosophy in a renowned university who bears also the honored title of privy councillor.
The old gentleman—white-haired, white-bearded, and wearing huge hornrimmed spectacles—had, it seemed, enlisted with almost his whole class at the outbreak of the war, but, owing to his age, he was not allowed to go to the front with them at the time.
He had at length been permitted to go, but only as part of the escort of four automobile loads of gifts and supplies for the regiment. The lieutenant in charge was at the moment reporting their arrival to his superior within; the professor, and a young peasant-born "Feldwebel," a noncommissioned officer of rank a step above the professor's, were waiting for him outside. The wait threatened to become wearisome.

Presently the old professor ransacked his pockets, produced an apple, licked his heels together in regulation fashion, and saluting his young superior (indefinitely inferior in the social scale), he said:

"Am I permitted to offer you an apple, Herr Feldwebel?" His ranking superior acknowledged the gift with curt military punctilio, then added respectfully:

"I thank you, Herr Privy Councilor!"—Youth's Companion.

SEEKS TRACES OF LOST RACE

New Yorker is Investigating Fate of Arawak Indians, Who Once Peopled Jamaica.

When in 1494, on his second voyage, Columbus discovered the island of Jamaica, it was populated by the Arawak Indians, who, although at first hostile to him, became friendly on his giving them clothing and other articles hitherto unknown to them. When, later, the Spaniards settled the island, they forced the Indians not only to do agricultural work in their own island, but to labor in the gold mines of Haiti.
So hard were the Spanish taskmasters that by 1558 the whole Arawak nation was exterminated. During the last six years G. C. Longley of Pelham Manor, in New York, has been seeking to recover all possible traces of the lost race. To that end he has spent the winter on the island in exploring the old kitchen middens, or refuse heaps, of the Arawaks, in which he has found, besides shells and pottery, and fish, turtle and conch bones, many celts, or rude chisels, grinding stones, stone pendants, and axes—1,500 objects in all. The whole collection he has given to the American museum of natural history in New York city. To the anthropologist, says the Youth's Companion, the most interesting objects are the cylindrical stone pendants, which were fashioned with sand and stone by endless rubbing. Pendants of exactly the same sort are worn today as insignia of office by chiefs or headmen of tribes in northern South America.

The Law of Advertising.

James R. Garfield of Cleveland, son of the late President Garfield, told one of the editors of the American Magazine the following story about traveling in 1878 as a boy with his father, who was campaigning. One night, after a speech in Michigan, young Garfield said to his father: "Why do you repeat so much? Do you know you said the same things several times tonight? Do you know that you said the same things tonight that you said this afternoon in Detroit?" General Garfield made this reply: "You happen to be an especially interested party and notice these repetitions.
Others do not. I repeat the same statements deliberately in order that people may finally get them. Anything that I want an audience to get and remember I repeat several times —in somewhat different form perhaps.
This practice I developed out of my experience which has shown me that people's attention is distracted in various ways and that a first or second statement may not really get to them.
You must insist on an idea or fact if you want to get anywhere with it."

New Anthracite Field.

The discovery of a twenty-foot vein of anthracite in Pennsylvania is good news for everybody. The Pennsylvania papers say that this is the second recent discovery in the Bear Ridge mountain region, and the third of importance in the anthracite territory within a few years. If we do not know the resources of so familiar and thoroughly exploited a territory as Pennsylvania, the inference is strong that the world at large still holds unsuspected riches, even at the time that the alarm of exhaustion is raised.
Fourty years ago, when the annual production of anthracite ran about 25,000,000 tons, alarmists thought there would soon be no more.
Now the output is about 100,000,000 tons, and the discoveries continue.—New York Times.

Helpless As a Babe.

Valley Heights, Va.—Mrs. Jennie B. Kirby, in a letter from this place, says: "I was sick in bed for 9 months with womanly troubles. I was so weak and helpless, at times, that I could not raise my head off the pillow. I commenced to take Cardui, and I saw it was helping me, at once.
Now I work all day." As a tonic, for weak women, nothing has been found for 50 years, that would take the place of Cardui. It will surely do you good. Cardui is prepared from vegetable ingredients, and has a specific, curative effect on the womanly organs. Try a bottle to-day. At your druggist's.—Advertisement.

DEATH PENALTY FOR FAILURE

New Guinea "Sorcerer" Apparently Recognized Justice of the Sentence Imposed on Him.

Not long since, in an inland village in New Guinea, a certain mother-in-law fell ill. A puri-puri man was fetched to her aid from a neighboring village. Could the puri-puri man cure the mother-in-law? Oh, yes, the puripuri man could surely cure the mother-in-law! The puri-puri man must have, however, as a fee for the cure, a dog and a pig. It was a bargain.
The dog and the pig passed into the possession of the sorcerer and he set confidently to work. It was testified, in the course of the trial which presently came on, that the sorcerer, who was by this time the deceased in the case, had "made a few passes" over the mother-in-law and returned to his village.

"Now, my good woman," said he, upon departing, "you will get well."

This was not so.
"I called you to attend my mother-in-law," demanded the son-in-law, when next the sorcerer came.

It was admitted.
"I paid you a dog and a pig?"
"You did."

"My mother-in-law is dead."
"Hum—" It is easy to imagine the consternation of the sorcerer.

"Very well, then," declared the son-in-law. "As I paid you a dog and a pig to cure my mother-in-law, and as you did not cure her, I am going to kill you."

Thereupon the son-in-law went off with two friends in search of weapons. Witnesses of what followed told the magistrate before whom the case was tried that the sorcerer made no attempt to escape—that he calmly awaited the inevitable event. Presently the avengers returned. The son-in-law grievously spared the sorcerer; and the friends—lending countenance and aid—dispatched him with their stone clubs. Not one of these men—declares the magistrate—could be persuaded that they had done anything out of the way. Had the sorcerer not been paid a dog and a pig for his medicine? And had not his cure failed? And was he not a sorcerer, anyhow?—Norman Duncan in Harper's Magazine.

MYSTERY OF A BIG PISTOL

Probability That Weapon Found Under Surratt House May Have Belonged to Booth.

One of the numerous letters received by the Rambler in connection with his recent account of a trip over part of the route which John Wilkes Booth and David Herold followed in their flight from Washington after the assassination of Lincoln has come from Miss Irene Milstead. She tells of the finding of an old pistol under the Surratt house, at Surrattsville.
Firearms were hidden in the Surratt tavern, but it is believed that those which were stored there to be used, presumably by the abductors of President Lincoln, were taken from the place by Booth and Herold when they stopped there at about midnight in their flight from Washington.
Miss Milstead says: "About nineteen years ago the old house at Sur-rattsville was either rebuilt or remodeled, or, at any rate, part of it was torn down, and under it was found an old pistol. After reading your article in the Star I wondered if there could be any possibility of the pistol having been hidden by Booth or his companions. It has been in my possession ever since it was found. It is a very large pistol of the Beale make and seems to have been made in 1856." —Washington Star.

For Parallax Investigation.

The last annual report of the observatory of Yale university describes the new instrument for parallax investigation now being installed at the observatory to replace the six-inch heliometer heretofore used for such observations. It consists of a photographic telescope of fifteen inches aperture and fifty feet focal length, to be mounted parallel to the earth's axis of rotation. Light from the celestial bodies will be reflected on the lens from a thirty-inch silver-on-glass mirror, carried by an equatorial mounting. This mirror will also direct the rays of light to another lens of ten inches aperture, mounted close beside the photographic lens and having it as the objective of the guiding telescope. The star images in the field will, of course, revolve about the axis of the lens, and means have been provided for rotating the photographic plate-carrier at the rate of the earth's diurnal rotation.

Cleanliness and Cash.

"The day has passed," says the bulletin of the Chicago health department, "when a dealer in foodstuffs can keep a dirty, fly-infested store and hope to hold his trade. That this is true is due to the fact that today every housewife knows that flies carry unspeakable filth on their feet and that they leave it on whatever food they are permitted to come in contact with. And because this is true, the careful, intelligent women are doing their household marketing in clean stores. And, once more, this is why cleanliness counts for both cash and customers."

Endless Possibilities.

"Soon there will be nothing left for scientists to discover."
"No fear of that. Scientists can always go on discovering that what scientists previously discovered is all wrong."
